

Amy Accardo, Ed.D

Dr. Amy Accardo is an Assistant Professor in the Interdisciplinary and Inclusive Education Department At Rowan University. Dr. Accardo's scholarly activities focus on promoting equitable education opportunities for individuals on the autism spectrum. She strives to eliminate barriers to postsecondary education and to reduce the research to practice gap teaching reading comprehension and writing to autistic students.

Amy serves as founder and chair of the AERA Autism Spectrum Research Committee and has presented research nationally on autism and topics including college access, literacy and mental health. She currently teaches graduate special education coursework and is coordinator of the PhD in Education Program. Recent publications include: Accardo et al. (2019). College access, success & equity for students on the autism spectrum. JADD <https://rdcu.be/bQf53>, and Accardo et al. (2019). Writing interventions for individuals with ASD: A research synthesis. JADD <https://rdcu.be/bpHbN>